

BELL'S SEASONING

Acknowledged by all to be 40 Years the original favorite. Imitated by many, equalled by none for delicately Flavoring Dressings for Poultry, Game, Meats, Fish, Oysters, etc.

1876, J. B. Wistar, Grand Central Hotel, New York City, wrote: "I have been over-pursued to try other makes. In every instance have been obliged to either return or throw it away and call back on the old reliable, BELL'S SEASONING."
1878, A. Alsdorf, Tremont House, Boston, wrote: "Unquestionably the most superior article in use."
1892, Alsdorf & Webster, Maplewood Hotel, White Mountains, wrote: "The only article of its kind used in our kitchen during the past ten years."
1897, Alsdorf & Graybill, Nags, Hotel Tulleries, Hotel Empire, Boston, New Orleans House, Springfield, Hotel Titchfield, Fort Angeles, Jamaica, West Indies, wrote: "We are using your Seasoning in our different hotels. It gives entire satisfaction."
Remember, a 10c. can of Bell's Seasoning is sufficient to flavor the dressing for 100 lbs. of meat or poultry, and the 25c. can 300 lbs.

PRESIDENT MELLEN SUGGESTS PLAN

For Consideration for a Court of Commerce—Answers Some Questions.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 31, 1910.

Messrs. Everett and Clegg, Arthur S. Barnes, Secretary, Connecticut Editorial Association, New Haven, Conn.:

Dear Sirs: I have received requests from some of the members of your association to make my letters briefer. I shall accordingly not undertake in this letter to do more than answer some of your questions regarding a court of commerce.

I suggest for consideration the following definite plan. Let the legislature provide three additional judges of the superior court. Let the chief justice of the supreme court from time to time assign a judge or judges of the superior court to hold the sessions of the court of commerce. This court should have legislative authority to act under its own simple rules of procedure and a revenue, which should be so framed as both to prevent delay in the settlement of controversies and also to give the freedom of inquiry necessary for the effective investigation and speedy and just determination of difficult and complex commercial questions.

It is my belief that such a court would be better adapted to deal with a good many intricate commercial controversies than the ordinary court of justice with its technical and rigid procedure. But I now propose such a court only for the determination of controversies arising out of the reasonableness and fairness of charges made and services rendered by those who serve the general public, including particularly the so-called public service corporations.

You ask me to state the difference between a court and a commission and to explain why a court is better for the trial of controversies. If this question were asked by an inquiring statesman from Spain or from some other oriental nation, desirous of understanding why Anglo-Saxons believe in the separation of the judicial and executive departments of government, I should consider it a natural question. But has all the experience of our fathers been so far forgotten that it is necessary for me to elaborately justify to the people of Connecticut a preference to be tried before a court of justice rather than before an administrative commission?

It would be absurd for a business man like myself to attempt to make in a few letters an adequate defense of settled principles of civil liberty and American constitutional law. But I can see, as I think other business men can, that a commission sits and acts as a branch of the executive of the state, and therefore must be free from many wholesome restraints against arbitrariness and injustice with which the law has surrounded judicial activities. I know also that the life training of our judges peculiarly fits them to weigh evidence, to analyze a complex mass of facts and to apply logically and justly to the relevant facts the rules of law and right reason properly controlling the issues of the controversy. I feel, moreover, in common with other men of sober thought, that our judges are peculiarly protected by the traditions of their high office and by constitutional guarantees in the independent, single-minded administration of justice.

But I ought not to have to argue this point. It ought to be enough for me to ask you in turn, and through you the thoughtful people of Connecticut, to refresh your memories of past struggles for civil liberty, and to give for yourselves the reasons why the personal and property rights of the people of this country are protected, as nowhere else in the world, under a government of law, safeguarded by the reference of controversies to the determination of an independent and trained judiciary.

If, as you say, and as I believe, the thoughtful people of this state do not share the popular prejudice against corporations and against railroads, I ask them, through you, to secure for us what they would not deny to the most despised and hated individual, namely, the right to have controversies affecting important property rights tried before a properly constituted judicial tribunal. Yours truly,

C. S. MELLEN, President.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Norwich First to Move.

Mr. Editor: With such a perfect site as has been offered to the Hartford College club committee, of which Miss Elizabeth C. Wright is chairman, by our townsman, Charles H. Brown, for the location of the Connecticut women's college, it has not been thought necessary hitherto to waste any ammunition in newspaper controversy, but it will be interesting to one who has become acquainted with the fact that Norwich was about the first city to offer a definite site to a college committee, to present the desirability of its interesting features and receive from the committee the detail of their wishes in the matter.

Like Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke and Smith in Massachusetts, the Gales Ferry site is just sufficiently removed from the city to leave it under best conditions for growth and environment but within easy shopping distance and with a third of the acreage already grown to wooded park land which is in prime condition to be turned into promenade grounds, upon its inception, conditions that have taken some of the older colleges a score and more of years to grow, the chances of its favorable impression seem assured.

The aquatic interests which with even our women's colleges are quite a factor where opportunity offers can be looked after with greater convenience and safety than any other location in the state. Just at the approach to the half mile of riverfront commanding an view of the Connecticut Long Island sound, the railroad passes through a convenient cut in the rising ground on the brow of which crosses the bridge leading to the riverbank at the site level. The contour of the bank at this point is the most beautiful to be cooler during the warm months of the year than most parts of the surrounding country and quite a colony of summer residences have grown up in consequence in the near vicinity.

To the north, at just the right distance to interest the student pedestrian, the site is bordered by a beautiful story is intertwined with local tradition of a century since and offers a commanding view of all sections for miles around.

Committees of the Board of Trade, Business Men's association and Women's club have taken the matter in hand and every citizen feels enthusiastic when acquainted with the matter, which argues well for the future of the college. The general contributions toward an endowment fund is taken up in the future. It is expected that the committee from Hartford will visit the site in a few days and its advantages thoroughly pointed out by a Norwich delegation.

A PROGRESSIVE.

THREE MEN ARRESTED

AT ACAPULCO, MEXICO.

Suspected of Being Implicated in Los Angeles Explosion.

Mexico City, Oct. 30.—The names of the three men arrested at Acapulco yesterday, suspected of being implicated in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building and who were aboard the power schooner Kate, are Harry Ham, O. Carlson and Dan Archer, according to telegrams received here today. The names given are as they were registered on the schooner. In addition to the captain of the vessel, Swan Engdette, and Engineer Adolph Adolphson, also said to be the owner, the schooner is under guard of customs house officials.

As soon as the schooner entered port to take on a supply of gasoline she was boarded by the American consul and a port official. The sum of $10,000 was found on board. The captain stated that the schooner had been engaged to take the schooner from San Francisco to the Galapagos Islands, off the coast of Peru and Ecuador. The register of the schooner states that Ham, Carlson and Archer each were to receive $20 a month. Carlson, Ham and Archer are now in prison, charged with pending investigation. On account of a storm the men were forced to throw overboard the gasoline on hand and run into port for a new supply.

Byron's Thin Diet.

Lord Byron had decided views on diet. His fear of fatness rather than its suitability to his work dictated the starvation to which he subjected himself. In 1813 he lived upon tea and six biscuits a day, and in 1816 his diet consisted of a thin slice of bread for breakfast and a vegetable dinner. He chewed mastic and tobacco to keep down his hunger in between. While at Athens he drank vinegar and water and seldom ate more than a little rice. And yet Trelawny has recorded that no man had brighter eyes or a clearer voice.

Have You a Cold?

Better Check It At Once—Neglect Often Leads To Serious Illness.

Oil of Pine is a splendid natural remedy for the treatment of throat and bronchial troubles. Because of its purity and freedom from opiates and narcotic drugs it is especially valuable for children. Two or three drops of the Pine, on a little sugar, affords speedy relief to the most obstinate cough, soothes the irritation, and heals the inflamed mucous membrane. Oil of Pine is often prescribed in the following formula, which, it is claimed, will break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable. Mix a half-ounce of Oil of Pine with two ounces of glycerine and eight ounces (a half-pint) of pure Whisky. These ingredients can be purchased in nearly every first-class drug store and are easily mixed in a large bottle. A teaspoonful once in four hours is the usual dose.

Quickly allays all irritation and heals inflammation of the mucous membrane. Unexcelled for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness and all throat and bronchial affections.
